

DAFFODILS

Narcissus. Amaryllidaceae.

In the following catalogue, I have listed cultivars alphabetically under the separate raisers. I have annotated some of the cultivars, but because details of all the others are available in the International daffodil register (1998), I have omitted descriptions, parentage and awards (except awards of garden merit AGM). I am extremely grateful to the Daffodil Registrar, Sally Kington, for her collaboration, and most especially for providing me with alphabetic lists of cultivars for the raisers.

Origins unknown

'Big Irish Spurius'

name – note that this is probably not a valid cultivar name, but it was a convenient moniker used by daffodil enthusiasts. 'It increases slowly, making bulbs larger than any other trumpet Daffodil, some of the bulbs producing four or five scapes. The flower, though less bright in colour and different in shape, rivals in size those of the true N. maximus.'

Origin: 'Nobody knows its origin ...' – a daffodil that populates the pages of horticultural periodicals in the 1880s, and obviously known from Irish gardens. C. Wolley Dod was one who wrote about it.

With your remark that this Daffodil deserves a better name I quite agree, for it is nearly the finest variety of Narcissus Pseudo-Narcissus in cultivation. ... I first received flowers of it, followed by a hamper of bulbs about seven years ago, from a lady on whose father's land it grew near the river Blackwater, in the county of Cork. It grows there still ... It flowers with me here nearly as early as the Tenby Daffodil, coming out in average season the first week in March ... I do not think the large variety was known in England until I distributed some about five years ago.

'Marie'

'A fine bold' flower 'almost as white as a good cernuus'.

Origin: a spontaneous seedling in a garden in Co. Wicklow, where 'there are many interesting seedlings'. This one was a cross between N. bicolor and N. cernuus (see also 'Rosa'). Frederick Moore wrote that

One of the secrets of these seedlings appearing in this Wicklow garden is the fact that it has always been tended by a lady who loves it, who weeds it herself by hand, and who never allows a scuffle-hoe to be used against her pets.

ref: Gard chron. 31 (3 May 1902): 294.

'Rosa'

White flowers.

Origin: a spontaneous seedling in a garden in Co. Wicklow, where 'there are many interesting seedlings'. This one, 'a cross between N. nanus and N. cernuus'. (see also 'Marie').

ref: Gard chron. 31 (ser. 3) (3 May 1902): 294.

Annesley, Lord: Castlewellan, Co. Down
1 cultivar recorded.

'Countess of Annesley'

'a distinct and beautiful daffodil'; no other description traced.

Origin: 'Castlewellan is the home of a distinct and beautiful Daffodil which was found naturalized and growing abundantly some years ago, and whence it has been distributed under the name of Countess of Annesley.'

ref: Flora & sylvia 2 (1904): 213.

Bucknall, Mrs.: Creagh Castle, Doneraile, Co. Cork.

"Creagh Castle seedling"

'A small yellow self bearing some resemblance to N. minor, from which it is probably descended.'

Origin: 'A welcome little Daffodil' from Mrs. Bucknall, who brought it to the fortnightly exhibition at the Royal Horticultural Society, London, on 31 January 1928. 'It was a seedling that had been flowering freely in the open without protection from January 14th. Unfortunately for this seedling it was shown so early in the year that it did not come before the Narcissus Committee.'

Carncairn Daffodils – see Reade, Kate

Currey, Miss Frances ('Fanny') Wilmot: Lismore, Co. Waterford.

7 cultivars recorded.

There is scant information about Fanny Currey in horticultural literature; P. R. Barr noted that she was 'for many years ... a large grower of Daffodils at Lismore ... and exhibited regularly at the Midland Daffodil Show and in London. She was a woman of many accomplishments, proficient in riding, shooting and fishing, besides being clever with her pencil. She and her life-long friend, Miss Helen O'Hara, were well known figures at the Midland and London Daffodil shows previous to 1910. After a long illness Miss Currey passed away in 1912.' This is not accurate however.

Fanny Currey was born in Lismore in 1848 and died there in 1917.

Daisy Hill Nursery: Newry, Co. Down

6 cultivars recorded.

'Clogher Park'

'A most handsome kind, similar to though smaller than 'Sir Watkin'.'

Origin: Possibly introduced by Tom Smith; the name suggests that it came from Clogher in Co. Tyrone; at least by appearing in the Daisy Hill Nursery's 1899 catalogue, this is the earliest published record of this cultivar.

refs: A.B.C. list of bulbous ... plants no. 37 (1899); Nelson & Grills, Daisy Hill Nursery (1998), 127.

'Daisy Hill'

'Perianth deep primrose colour, cup the most intense orange ... a distinctly shaped flower'.

Origin: A seedling of 'Sir Watkin', raised at Daisy Hill Nursery.

refs: Daisy Hill Nursery catalogue no. 53 (Autumn 1902); Nelson, The new plantsman 4 (1997): 98-114; Nelson & Grills, Daisy Hill Nursery (1998), 127. before 1928

'Frivolity'

syn: N. cernuus 'Frivolity'

'The trumpet is cleft into four segments which are very much frilled in the quaintest manner, giving it the appearance of a perfectly double flower: very distinct and quite unique.'

Origin: A seedling raised at Daisy Hill Nursery from 'Cernuus'; a single bulb cost 30 shillings (£1. 10s. 0d.) in 1904.

refs: A.B.C. list of bulbous ... plants no. 62: 55 (Autumn 1904); Nelson & Grills, Daisy Hill Nursery (1998), 127.

'Pallidus Maximus'

'New, a much magnified form of its useful parent.'

Origin: Possibly raised at Newry; at least by appearing in the Daisy Hill Nursery's 1899 catalogue, this is the earliest published record of this cultivar.

refs: A.B.C. list of bulbous ... plants no. 37 (1899); Nelson & Grills, Daisy Hill Nursery (1998), 127.

'Princess May'

'N. cernuus white, trumpet slightly stained sulphur.'

Origin: Possibly raised at Newry; at least by appearing in the Daisy Hill Nursery's 1899 catalogue, this is the earliest published record of this cultivar.

Gore-Booth, Sir Josslyn; Lissadell, Co. Sligo
 16 cultivars recorded.

'In the production of new varieties Sir Josslyn is, however, an adept. At the commencement of his work in bulb-farming, he undertook the whole of the fertilising himself, and watched the growth of every collection of seeds. Now he has trained others to help him, and the work is done upon a large scale.'
 It is possible that work on hybridizing Narcissus was also carried out at Lissadell by Joseph Sangster; he published an article on this topic in Irish gardening (4 (1909): 181-182) but did not mention any particular Lissadell daffodils.

'Bishop Mann'

Flowers ??

Origin: 'I found this daffodil years since', wrote Hartland, '...in an old garden at Bishopstown, near Cork, and where the border was covered over with Laurels, Ivies, Mahonias and Hypericums etc. I removed the bulbs, that had been planted for 150 years to my present residence. The garden was on the old palace grounds attached to the See of St Finbarr's and Bishop Mann was the last resident divine, and must have been very fond of flowers. The bulbs were growing in between huge roots of beech, at least 200 years planted, and we had to use a crow-bar and pick-axe to get at them and lost or mangled numbers.'

'Colleen Bawn'

'A small trumpet daffodil, 10 inches high, white, tinted pale primrose yellow, especially the corona, which is turned back at the mouth and much frilled. Just above the ovary the perianth tube is deeper greenish yellow fading towards the ovary. Perianth segments broad and flat, hardly twisted.'

Origin: Hartland named and introduced this daffodil. It is likely that it was one of the white-flowered daffodils that he had collected in gardens about Cork in the latter quarter of the nineteenth century. Very rare, but still in cultivation. Stocks of this daffodil were damaged in a fire on 17 November 1892 –

a fire, originating in the out-offices at Ard Cairn, Cork, and spreading to the bulb-house ... half of this rare collection of Trumpet White Daffodils has been entirely lost, some very valuable and scarce. One lot of 'Colleen Bawn', probably the most beautiful of all (600 bulbs), just removed from the warehouse for planting, are a great loss.

'Miss Rose Bedford'

syn: 'Rosa Bedford' Flowers white.

Origin: A seedling raised by William Baylor Hartland, Ard Cairn, Cork. As for the name, this is the story:

It was so named by the late Mr. Burbidge, and Mr. Hartland repeated to s the circumstances under which it received the name, Mr. Burbidge was on a visit to Ard cairn, and on seeing the seedling exclaimed – "Hallo, Hartland! You have a lovely thing there, the whitest thing I have ever seen. Let me name it after a dear friend of mine." And so it was there and then named "Rose Bedford".'

Miss Rose Bedford was the daughter of Frederick Bedford, head-gardener at Straffan House, Co. Kildare.

'Rip van Winkle'

Flowers with 'narrow pointed petals of light yellow shading to a deeper tone towards the base, and always with a slight shade of green, and in rich soils is almost entirely green'; a dwarf, double., with repeated whorls of petals.

Origin: At least marketed for the first time under this name by William Baylor Hartland, but whence it came and when are most obscure. Burbidge thought it was a double for of N. pseudo-narcissus.

'White Minor'

'Another of the very elect of the earth'; white flowers; 'most delightful little flower'.

Origin: 'It was found in an old Irish garden, and has not gone far afield yet', wrote E. A. Bowles, and he continued rapturously –

But [it] arrived here last autumn, a token of the kindly heart and good memory of Mr. Bennett Poë, who recalled my raptures over its refined beauty when I saw a bunch of it in his drawing-room at one of those delightful gatherings for a cup of tea after a long RHS day, alas! Too seldom possible for me, who throughout the Spring have ever a train to catch ... Even among the choicest orchids and rare exotic from his collection of rare and lovely plants that always fill his vases ... even in such company, White Minor held its own as a gem. I was a prisoner in a sick-room when it flowered this year, but it came to my bedside and filled me with pride and gratitude and hope for next season. It is just the plant for a choice corner of the rock garden ...'

Hartland stocked this plant in the early 1900s.

'Lucifer'

'Creamy-white petals and a frilled, compact orange-red trumpet, a colour sharper and brighter than hitherto known'.

Origin: There is an interesting passage in a letter addressed to Frederick Burbidge, a friend of Mrs Lawrenson and a daffodil expert, from the Revd George Engelheart, another daffodil enthusiast.

Can you give me any information about the fine scarlet-cupped incomparabilis of which you brought a drawing to Chiswick 2 years ago [1889], & which I believe was raised by some lady in 1895 Ireland. Would she allow her name to be known, that I might correspond with her, and is it at all likely that she would sell a bulb, as it is my desire to obtain all the best modern seedlings if possible? — Or possibly she would accept a bulb of my prize seedling 'Albatross' in exchange. But of course I shall understand if she prefers to retain the plant. [G. H. Engleheart to F. W. Burbidge 10 October 1891]

Undoubtedly the lady was Mrs Lawrenson; the daffodil may well have been 'Lucifer'.

Mrs Lawrenson's identity was not really a secret. In 1896, Burbidge spoke about her directly in his address entitled 'The past, present and future of the Narcissus', which opened the 1896 Daffodil Conference.

Then we want colour, tricolours, it may be, instead of bicolours, or at least we want Horsfield's Daffodil with an orange or scarlet trumpet. It is suggestive that our highest coloured kinds, those having red cups, are hybrids of N. poeticus poetarum, with varieties of the Daffodil; – such as N. C. J. Backhouse, N. Mary Anderson, N. Queen Sopha, and various forms of Barri or Burbidgei. The purest and most brilliant varieties yet raised were obtained in Ireland some years ago by Mrs. Lawrenson between N. princeps and N. poeticus, and have crape-like white perianths and scarlet crowns, and so far these are the earliest and highest coloured of all the hybrids known to me.

'The O'Mahony'

syn: 'The O'Mahoney'

A form of N. pseudonarcissus; flowers lemon yellow, corona smooth, flared at mouth and notched, darker in colour than petals; occasionally has 7 to 8 petals; early very early in flower. Class 1Y-Y.

Origin: Presumed to have come originally from The O'Mahony's garden at Coolballintaggart, Co. Wicklow, but it only 'surfaced' in the early 1990s, when various people, for example Kath Dryden and Kate Reade received it from Frank Waley (as 'The O'Mahoney')

'Foundling'

Rarely more than 30cm tall; flowers with white outer perianth segments, becoming reflexed; corona salmon-pink, to 3cm across, 1.5cm long, deeply ribbed and expanded at mouth.

Origin: an 'orphan' seedling of unknown parentage.

'Foundling' was the first pink cyclamineus (as far as I know) and when we produced it I flew over to the RHS for the late Daffodil Show where it was acclaimed and it now has probably won more prizes on the show bench than almost any other daffodil cultivar, and is known all over the world. Many people have said to me why sell it to the Dutch who are increasing it very fast and will bring the price down? That pleases me as I would like to see more people enjoying it. It owes me nothing!

'Helen O'Hara'

Miss O'Hara was a 'life-long friend' of Miss Fanny Currey, and like Miss Currey she was a 'well known [figure] at the Midland and London daffodil shows previous to 1910' (Daffodil Yb 1933: 35).

Tymons, Revd. Frederick; Drumcondra, Dublin.

1 cultivar.

'Reverend Frederick Tymons'

'This charming daffodil varies in height, some years being much longer in the stalk, but there is no variation in the volume it received, nor in the pleasure it gives. ... evidently a form of Narcissus Princeps.'

Origin: this was raised at Baskin Hill, Drumcondra, Co. Dublin, by the Revd Frederick Tymons 'who was a noted and successful gardener, and was well known for the skill with which he grew tulips, auriculas, and, indoors, that most capricious plant – Disa grandiflora.' (see Helleborus niger 'Baskin Hill')

This was described by 'Willbrook' – surely a pen-name for Lady Moore – as 'the earliest true Daffodil, or trumpet Narcissus, that I know ... which was open in this garden on the 2nd February.'

'Cantatrice'

'Beautiful pure white trumpet of smoothest texture'; Class 1W-W.

Origin: from 'Beersheba' pollinated by 'Eskimo'; first flowered in 1932. Wilson recorded on 4 April 1943 that

It was one of those still balmy April days of heavenly beauty with soft air and gentle sunlight filtered through thin cloud. In the evening the masses of wonderful and perfect flowers seemed to be of quite unearthly beauty – never have I seen 'Cantatrice' so fine in texture, they were like the finest marble.

This was not 'a product of the mainstream of Wilson's breeding of white trumpets ... but rather a one-off, which has itself featured little in subsequent breeding.'
awards: AM RHS (1939 as exhibition flower); AM RHS (1956 as garden plant); FCC RHS (1958).
